Chapter 1 by madison stanley

"Gabby you can't keep this up" Mrs. Hart held up a sheet with 10 assignments marked "Late or missing or F". "I know you have the potential" she said. Gabby thought in her head "That's what you think" she saw Re and Liz and Kayley out back smoking cigarettes. She didn't understand school. She just understood how to wear torn clothing and not fit in. "Look at me" Mrs.Hart said."I have no choice to send you to a boarding school". "Gabby's eyes grew. "WHAT?" she said. "You can't" "As your caretaker I have to"

Have to. Pah. She didn't have to do anything. Why couldn't Mrs. Hart be like all the caretakers on the T.V., uncaring and ignorant. Why couldn't she just let Gabby drop out of school and fail. Sit around out back with the girls she was almost kind of friends with and let all her worries disappear as her life faded out like smoke.

"It's a good school." Mrs. Hart said as they drove up. Gabby didn't care. The uniform looked stupid, and it itched. "They're the ones who came to me, months back. I wasn't certain I'd take them up on the offer."

Gabby slouched farther down in to her seat, hoping the car would eat her up. This was horrible. The worst of all possible worlds. She felt the car roll to a stop, but she didn't move to sit up.

"Gabriela," Mrs. Hart groaned, and I pushed myself out of the car, if only so that she wouldn't drag me out. I sighed. This was going to suck so much.

The towering boarding school stood behind the sea of clouds on the Marsh. A boring and overly pretentious name to a boring school.

"I'm sure you'll like it here." Mrs. Hart said, walking with me to the front. I tried to give as much of a glowering air of hatred as I could, towards her and the students and the whole school.

Yeah. I was /totally/ going to like it here.

Chapter 3 by alina

Gabby tried to resist as much as possible, but Mrs. Hart wasn't having it.

"You will fit in here, Gabby, I promise." Mrs. Hart told her. Gabby was close to her breaking point.

"Don't make promises you can't keep" Gabby silenced her with one sentence and it was an awkward walk into the office of the "Boarding School for the Academically Challenged."
